What does SIHA do?
The Sawtooth Interpretive & Historical Association (SIHA) is a non-profit, member-based organization working in cooperation with the Sawtooth and Salmon-Challis National Forests. Since 1972, we have worked to provide interpretive and educational programs to preserve the past and protect the future of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and Salmon River country.

At the Redfish Visitor Center & Gallery, SIHA Naturalists provide guided walks, Junior Ranger programs, evening educational presentations, ranger talks, short patio talks, informational discovery stations, and special programs. They also provide maps, books, and information, host an art gallery of local and regional talent, welcome visitors to the Salmon River country, inform adventurers about Leave-No-Trace principles at trailhead portals, and answer myriad questions.

At the Stanley Museum, SIHA displays relics of the past and an older way of life. To further inform both locals and visitors alike, SIHA collects oral histories, maintains photo archives, hosts free lectures, organizes field trips, provides tour information, and sponsors other activities and events.

Who We Are:
SIHA’s mission is to protect and advance the natural and cultural history of Idaho’s Sawtooth–Salmon River country through preservation and education.

We Need Your Help!

Historic buildings require upkeep. SIHA is raising funds to accomplish upgrades and enhancements at the Stanley Museum, as well as building a historic replica “Clerk’s Cabin” staff house. Contribute to our Building Fund today!

Above: Historic photo of the Clerk’s Cabin at Valley Creek Ranger Station, circa 1940 (today’s Stanley Museum). The cabin was remove sometime during or after the 1950s.
Project Description

Stage I: The oldest building at the Stanley Museum complex, the garage/office, built in the late 1920’s, needs restoration. It requires a new foundation, subfloor bracing, roof repairs, exterior log maintenance, and improved chinking. In addition, a 1980’s non-historic addition must be removed prior to repairs. This structure was originally a small, one-car garage and telephone switchboard; later it was turned into the Ranger’s office. When fully restored, the building will serve as the SIHA office and book room. Estimated cost of historic building restoration: $30,200

Stage II: Construct a replica of the historic “Clerk’s Cabin” that was on the site from the 1940’s-1960’s as housing for the Stanley Ranger District Clerk, when the present museum was the Valley Creek Ranger Station. The new building’s exterior will be designed to look like the old Clerk’s Cabin and be placed on the same historic location behind the Ice House/Toolshed. Estimated cost of building historic: $103,000

SIHA was able to complete Phase I in 2019 thanks to our donors and has raised almost half of the funds needed for Phase II already! Help us reach our goal!!
